Section: MY STORY
Peter Goldstein started a hands-on program that teaches high school students about recycling and entrepreneurship--and that even pays off.
WHAT MADE YOU START THE PROGRAM? Rather than just studying and talking about recycling, the goal was to get students to actively participate.
HOW DOES IT WORK? We call it the Skyline Green Team. About 50 to 60 kids go through campus with recycling roll carts collecting trash and depositing it in three large recycling Dumpsters. Faculty and staff have joined the Skyline Green Team as well, and teachers have recycling boxes in their classrooms.

3. To return to English, click Return.

Note: If you print, e-mail or save the full text, it will be delivered in the language of the database. However, you can print the translated text using your browser's Print function.

Abstract: The article discusses how the U.S. Congress is unable to pass legislation regarding global warming. The author notes how Republican senator Lindsey Graham changed his position regarding climate change and comments on the potential effectiveness of legislation for emissions caps and trading. He suggests the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is better suited to establish regulations to prevent climate change due to the level of technical information and long-term planning required.

Only bureaucrats can solve global warming.
FIVE YEARS AGO, South Carolina Republican Senator Lindsey Graham joined a handful of senators traveling to the Yukon territory to view firsthand the effects of climate change. Witnessing melting ice caps and permafrost, and Inuit communities struggling to cope with a transforming environment, Graham was "moved." "Climate change is different when you come here, because you see the faces of people experiencing it," he said. In the following years, he asserted that "climate change is real" and promoted a cap-and-trade bill in the Senate.
Today, Graham is sprinting in the other direction. In April, he abandoned his climate bill when Democrats decided to focus on immigration reform first. He remained opposed even when they ultimately agreed to take it up. These days, he is refusing to acknowledge that carbon-dioxide emissions cause warmer temperatures. "I think they've been alarmist and the science is in question," he says. Graham no longer sounds especially moved by the plight of the Inuit, who may be facing a threat to their way of life but are not facing the threat of a right-wing primary challenge.
The canary in the coal mine is a classic metaphor for the science of climate change. For the politics of climate change, Graham is the canary. Once the sole Senate Republican supporting cap-and-trade, he's keeled over in his cage, his limp corpse a sign that Congress can't handle this issue. There's only one solution at hand: Let the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) impose regulations to stop climate change.
Three years ago, the Supreme Court ruled that the Clean Air Act compelled the EPA to regulate carbon-dioxide

Human health is at growing risk due to the multiple climatic effects of global warming. More importantly, it is becoming evident that individual ecocrises are not independent phenomenon but are entwined with and contribute to the intensification of other environmental predicaments. In light of a range of imagined futures that share a narrative about global warming that posits the existence of global "winners and losers" (regions that will benefit from and those that will suffer from global warming), this paper examines two specific cases--Midwestern flooding during the summer of 2008 and the accelerating degradation of the Sacramento Delta. These examples, expressions of convergent ecocrises, here termed pluralea interactions, suggest that going beyond global warming reveals the folly of "winner and loser" thinking. The paper concludes with a discussion of the implications of the health impacts of intersecting ecocrises for directions in medical anthropology. Title: Global Warming Pattern Formation: Sea Surface Temperature and Rainfall.
Authors: Shang-Ping Xie,Deser, Clara,Vecchi, Gabriel A.,Jian Ma,Haiyan Teng,Wittenberg, Andrew T.
Source: Journal of Climate
Date: 2010
Publication Type: Academic Journal
Abstract: Spatial variations in sea surface temperature (SST) and rainfall changes over the tropics are investigated based on ensemble simulations for the first half of the twenty-first century under the greenhouse gas (GHG) emission scenario A1B with coupled ocean–atmosphere general circulation models of the Geophysical Fluid Dynamics Laboratory (GFDL) and National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR). Despite a GHG increase that is nearly uniform in space, pronounced patterns emerge in both SST and precipitation. Regional differences in SST warming can be as large as the tropical-mean warming. Specifically, the tropical Pacific warming features a conspicuous maximum along the equator and a minimum in the...

Abstract: 1-800 Flowers.com (1-800 Flowers or "the company") offers gift products, including flowers, plants, gourmet foods, candies, gift baskets, confections, and other gift items. The company operates in the US. It is headquartered in Carle Place, New York and employs about 2,300 people.
The company recorded revenues of $714 million during the financial year ended June 2009 (FY2009), a decrease of 3.4% compared to 2008. The decline in revenues was attributed to continued weakness in the retail economy causing a decline in both customer orders as well as overall average order values as consumers traded down to lower price point products. The operating loss of the company was $72.5 million in FY2009, compared to an operating profit of $39.3 million in 2008. The net loss was $98.4 million in FY2009, compared to a net profit of $21.1 million in 2008.

Trying New Features

"Try New Features" is an innovative way to learn about the features and functionality available on EBSCO*host*. When the library administrator activates "New Features," the New Features link will display in the top toolbar on EBSCO*host*. You can visit the New Features Screen, try out selected features for your session, learn about additional features that are already active, and read about features that will be coming soon.

EBSCO Publishing decides which features can be tried and which features will display on the New Features Screen. The library administrator decides whether to show or hide these features, and sets profile level defaults for any "try able" features. (Note: Sample features shown below.)
